Bringing science, public health and the community together to address conflict resolution and gun violence.

PARTNERSHIP GUIDE

On behalf of the Satcher Health Leadership Institute at Morehouse School of Medicine, the 100 Black Men of Atlanta Inc., The King Center for Nonviolent Social Change, and Emory, we cordially invite you to participate and offer your valuable input at our Second Annual Violence Prevention Symposium. This invitation is also extended to individuals within your organization who are actively working on violence prevention initiatives.

This Symposium is a gathering of community leaders, public health experts, elected officials, law enforcement, civil rights organizations, and, importantly, our youth and youth-focused organizations.

Violence has become an epidemic and an urgent public health issue requiring a coordinated public health response. This symposium will highlight scientific data reflecting these trends and bring together stakeholders to create actionable solutions.

The symposium's objectives are to:

1. Examine the scope of violence in Atlanta, using data to highlight gun violence as a public health issue that demands a public health response.
2. Establish a unified data system to track violence trends and foster partnerships to share and coordinate data for targeted prevention efforts
3. Explore new, evidence-based approaches to reducing violence, focusing on mental health awareness, suicide prevention, and community-driven interventions.
4. Actively engage youth in shaping violence prevention programs, with an emphasis on conflict resolution, creative expression, and addressing their needs in interventions.
5. Collaborate with local organizations, businesses, and policymakers to create sustainable, long-term strategies for violence prevention, ensuring ongoing support and funding.
6. Create clear, measurable action plans to reduce violence, with follow-ups to track progress and ensure accountability.

VIOLENCE PREVENTION SYMPOSIUM

Initiated by the 100 Black Men of Atlanta, Inc., the Violence Prevention Symposium has made significant, nationally recognized strides in violence prevention efforts. Our Conflict Resolution training programs, led by our member and Anti-Gun Violence Committee Chair, Joshua Byrd, have been featured in multiple media outlets, including national television networks.

These efforts have positioned the 100 Black Men of Atlanta, Inc. as a nationally recognized resource for violence prevention. Building on this foundation, we have partnered with the Satcher Health Leadership Institute at Morehouse School of Medicine, the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, and Emory to deliver a full-day program focused on reducing gun violence, raising awareness, and offering alternative solutions.
